Getting Your Music On The Radio

Radio Stations Types

There is basically two types of radio stations. Commercial and Non-Commercial.

1. Non-Commercial Stations (like the ones in this directory): These are typically the stations at or around college campuses. They don't have commercials, and that matter because they don't have to listen to corporate interest and answer to their listeners. There are some great public stations out there that are doing amazing and you want to make sure they get your work. They're the ones that want to get your music out to the listeners. These stations are usually under appreciated and understaffed.

2. Non-Commercial Student-Run Stations: A great place to get your music on. At the University of Washington you have KUOW (news and information) but for the students, you have the online-only Rainy Dawg Radio, which is a fantastic student-run station. There is many many out there that need your music and will be of the nicest people you'll deal with. The first time Nirvana was played it was on a college station at the time (this station). Red Hot Chili Peppers were once college radio faves, and the list goes on.

3. Commercial Stations: There's no sense in even sending these stations your music. They will more than likely not listen to your music or play it on the radio. These are the stations that play the major artist, the same top-40 over and over again. However, there is a few of these major stations with DJs that have their own shows and a little bit of more freedom. Places like Hot 97 in New York City with DJ Camilo on Saturdays from 2am-4am. The DJs and shows are usually late at night. You usually have the kid at the station who really DOES care about new and indie music hosting these shows and they are your best bets to champion your music and JUST like the college DJ's they are under appreciated and understaffed.

There will usually be two different shows: a local show and a new music show. Find out which show is which and send to the appropriate one.

This may be your only entry to the stations -- find the host, make friends, and submit your music.

Why College Radio

People wonder if it's still relevant to send music to radio stations. A lot of that depends on what the artists' plans and goals are. Although you might increase sales if you submit your music and are on tour, you can also get paid just for radio play and we'll discuss how later on. Radio is a promotional tool for artists and if you feel that it will help your brand and your tours, then go full steam ahead.

Remember that you will only make money in these ways:

1. Radio spins
2. Merchandise
3. Music Placements
4. Touring

Another way might be CDs or "vinyl" records. If you don't plan to tour, just make sure your hometown station gets your newest releases. If you're an artist that can play shows in your surrounding areas, make sure stations in the cities you plan to perform get your music.

Sending Your Music

Media formats can vary. Stations receive a lot of CDs and vinyl, but a lot more emails with files. That's the nature of radio stations but you have to remember to be patient and find ways to stand out. Most stations have an "MD" which is short for "Music Director". It is hard to get an MD's attention if you're a small band/artist and although stations have a variety of specialty shows and DJs, the MD is the decider for many stations. At some stations, the MD will decide about 50% of the music that should get played, and DJ's might have the freedom to play whatever they want for the other 50% of the time.

When Sending via E-mail:

Subject Line should always be "Music Submission"

It is ideal to send both stream and download links. This way, the radio station has a chance to check out any stream or video link. And if they like it, they can go ahead and download it from the same email.

The CD or Record

If you have any professional CDs or Records pressed up, this would be a great way to send your music to stations and stand out. However, you should not send CD's without artwork unless the station knows you and you want to get them your new music asap.

The One Sheet

A One Sheet is a must-have if you want to make it in the music business. Think of it as your resume. This is a quick outline of you as an artist and/or what you're sending. Keep it one sheet. It should include:

- The list of songs
- Label clean and explicit tracks (explicit tracks will not be played on the radio)
- List your best tracks
- Any artists you might sound like
- What other listeners have been saying about you
- Don't overdue it. Keep it simple.

Other Promotional Items

Things like photos or tour posters. If you have other cool items as well like stickers or merch. Don't send too much or you'll seem desperate. Have your music speak for itself. But if you start getting plays by a station, then it might be a good idea to send items. Don't try and convince someone to play you by sending too much though. Use your best judgement.

Keys To Following Up

Don't assume that your music is being played just because you sent out your music. Wait about two weeks before you follow up with a phone call or email. But the ON-AIR DJ is not the person you want to follow up with. Simply follow up with the MD and/or with the DJ when they are not on the air. Music Directors usually have office hours and this info is usually available on the station's website. They are usually just two days a week and only for a few hours so try and catch them at those times.

Wait Patiently

Don't stop trying and once you get through remain polite and get straight to the point. Ask the following questions and if any of the answers are "No" stop asking and politely tell them to have a nice day.

1. Did you receive (Artists)' CD or record?
2. Were you able to view (Artist) music?
3. Are you going to add (Artist) to your rotation?
4. Is there anything else you need?

Stations have different rotation systems: "Heavy", "Medium", and "Light" rotation. If you're put in any of these categories, then it's good news because you're getting airplay. Thank them and let them know you'll follow up to see how the music is being received and if its charting. Follow up for about 7 weeks, as that is the average life of a new release on rotation.

Request Your Music

Let your fans know of any stations that are playing your music, but make sure they don't overload the stations with request or getting mad if the station is not playing your music enough. DJ's can tell when supporters are OVERLOADING with requests and will not win any airplay. Stations will mostly play music based on merit and not on requests. Seriously, don't overdue it, but do it a little. You need to look at your career as a business, and screaming and crying to stations because they're not playing your music is not the way to run it.

Radio Promotion Companies

This all seems like a lot of work doesn't it? It is. You might want to hire someone to help. There are many radio promotion companies that help artists get radio play around the country. They can service around 300-600 stations for a fee from $500 to several thousand dollars. Promotional mailings to radio will cost for postage and lost CDs. You'll still handle the mailings while they track your release, contacting the Music Director each week and finding out where in rotation it is and how many plays it is getting per week. Here are a few radio promo companies:

Co-Sign
Dauntless Promotions
Fanatic
Insubordinate Media
Revolver
The Syndicate

Getting Paid for Radio Plays

In order to get paid for your radio spins, you must register with a Performance Rights Organization, a.k.a. "P.R.O." In the United States, there is two P.R.O.'s you can go with, BMI and ASCAP. You are owed money/royalties when your music is played on the radio and your PRO will collect these and pay you your earnings.

Final Tips

Radio has been getting its ass kicked by the bigger commercial interests that own the airwaves. Its unfortunate, and radio should be a place for art and creativity for local and national communities. But the idea is starting to pick back up and take off. Few stations are turning to a listener-supported model (less talk, less commercials, more music and connecting with their listeners). There are more and more stations now that you can send your music to without having to pay for CD pressing. There are more and more stations and sites for you to be heard so don't give up.

Being an artist is both a wonderful and frustrating thing. You only have a small timeframe in your life to make this happen and we wish more media outlets would support independent artists. The last thing you need is to beg people to play your songs.

Hopefully these tips will help you and you can always reach out to College Radio Directory for any advice or suggestions. Now more than ever, the world needs art and creativity. It needs people like you taking chances, it needs the next J. Cole, the next K Dot, the next Hendrix or Johnny Cash... the list goes on and that list got their airplay somewhere at sometime for the very FIRST time.

Good luck out there!

HOW TO GET THE MOST OUT OF COLLEGE RADIO DIRECTORY

Make sure your songs are Radio ready.

Radio stations will not play your music if they're smothered with explicit lyrics. Get your songs edited and send "Clean" versions.

When emailing stations, the subject line should be as follows:

Music Submission (your genre)

Same goes for when mailing in a CD

Give it some time.

Radio stations are busy and you're not the only one submitting music to them. Keep pushing!

Lastly, You can get paid if your song gets played.

Register with a Performance Rights Organization (PRO) like BMI or ASCAP. You are owed money/royalties when your music is played on the radio. Your PRO will collect and pay you your earnings.
